JUST “J” HOBIN

“Jay is an all-around great guy.

He makes himself available 24/7 and can get an operation up and running on a moment’s notice. He is conscientious and thorough and communicates easily with everyone he works with.

He is equally comfortable with foremen, safety personnel, superintendents, customers and owners. We are lucky to have him on the Marr team.”

Bob Dembitzki,
General Manager

Since his early days with Marr, Jay Hobin has proven to be a resource of strength within Marr Scaffolding Company. An imposing figure at first glance, Jay’s warm personality comes through with one quick welcoming smile. He began his career with Marr 18 years ago as part of the Erection & Dismantling (E&D) crew and due to his product knowledge and skill, is now Scaffold’s General Foreman for E&D.

Jay’s many responsibilities include directing and supervising all activities for the erection and dismantling of all E&D projects while coordinating all personnel training, preparation of job estimates and the planning of E&D assignments.

Additionally, Jay assumes the role of Safety Coordinator, ensuring that the safety of our own personnel as well as that of our customers is a top priority on all as well as that of our customers is a top priority on all projects, including fall protection, “tool box” talks and the proper use of equipment.

Jay is a devoted husband, father and grandfather. He and his wife Christine live in Rhode Island with their children, Craig and Lily, but can be found on week-ends at their lake home in New Hampshire where they enjoy fishing, boating, swimming and cooking together. Known for his playful spirit and big- heartedness, Jay welcomes friends and extended family members to share in their fun. Aidan, three, son of Jay’s stepson Brendan, has added an extra special ingredient to their family life.

Speaking of ingredients, Jay’s culinary skills actually are a huge attraction—his sauces, prepared from family recipes passed down from his Grandmother Chickie, and his barbeque skills are legendary. He also enjoys photography and, true-to-his-nature, playing games!
